Case Study: Quality of Life Without Compromising Work

A five-person group with one high-volume hospital and an imaging center was drowning in work, taking calls one week a month in addition to working full days. The grueling schedule and increasing call volume was taking such a toll on the radiologists that a few were contemplating leaving the group.

Enter NightShift. Within a few months after initial contact, the busy group was no longer in danger of losing its members—the services provided by NightShift allowed those radiologists to enjoy a more balanced work and personal life.

Making the Shift

There are many reasons why a group may consider hiring a teleradiology provider, from the grueling call schedule to the inability to hire top-notch radiologists to balancing the demands of a hospital-based practice with one's personal life. Many times it just makes economic sense to partner with a reputable provider you can trust with your hospital relationships, medical staff, patients and ultimately your practice. With a proven track record of reliability, quality and value, NightShift is that provider.

“Our medical staff was reluctant and, now, every hospital is very pleased with the extension of our service.”

— Roger Eng, M.D., Radiologist
